Dr. Keith Bohannon is the author of numerous essays and articles related to Civil War history published by academic and popular presses. Most recently he is author of an essay on Confederate General John B. Gordon's Reminiscences that appears in Gary Gallagher and Steve Cushman, eds., Civil War Writing, 1866-1989: New Perspectives on Primary Texts (Baton Rouge: Louisiana State University Press, 2019). Bohannon is a professor of history at the University of West Georgia in Carrollton, Ga.

Michael C. Hardy has a passion for Confederate history. Over the past three decades, he has written about people, places, and events which are frequently overlooked in the grand, sweeping narratives. Feeding the Army of Northern Virginia (Savas Beatie) is his twenty-fifth book. His articles have appeared in numerous national magazines, and Michael has been featured in the recent Blood and Fury: America's Civil War on the American Heroes Channel and on Civil War Talk Radio. In 2010, Michael was named the North Carolina Historian of the Year by the North Carolina Society of Historians. He is a graduate of the University of Alabama, and, since 1995, has called western North Carolina home.

Charles Knight is a native of Richmond, Virginia, where he developed a love of history at an early age. He has worked at museums and historic sites for more than 20 years, and has given historical presentations to audiences across the country. He is the author of Valley Thunder: The Battle of New Market (Savas Beatie, 2010), From Arlington to Appomattox: Robert E. Lee's Civil War Day by Day (Savas Beatie, 2021), as well as numerous magazine and journal articles, and was a historical advisor on the 2014 film Field of Lost Shoes. Knight is currently working on a biography of Confederate general and railroad magnate William Mahone. He currently resides in North Carolina with his wife and children, and is currently the Curator of Military History at the North Carolina Museum of History in Raleigh.

Scott Mingus is a retired research scientist and current consultant to the global pulp & paper industry. He holds U. S. patents in self-adhesive postage stamps and bar code labels. The Ohio native graduated from the Paper Science & Engineering program at Miami University in 1978. While working for Avery Dennison, he was part of the research team that developed the first commercially successful self-adhesive U. S. postage stamps. He has written 22 Civil War and Underground Railroad books. His biography of General William “Extra Billy” Smith won multiple awards, including the Dr. James I. Robertson, Jr. Literary Prize for Confederate History. He has also written several articles for Gettysburg Magazine, as well as for various historical journals. Scott has appeared on C-SPAN, C-SPAN3, PCN, and other TV networks. Mingus and his wife Debi live in Manchester Township north of York. For more than a decade, he has written a popular blog on the Civil War history of York County (www.yorkblog.com/cannonball). He received the 2013 Heritage Profile Award from the York County History Center for his many contributions to local Civil War history. He also has written six scenario books for Civil War miniature wargaming. His great-great-grandfather was a 15-year-old drummer and rifleman in the 51st Ohio Infantry in the Western Theater, and other family members fought at Antietam and Gettysburg in the 7th West Virginia of the Army of the Potomac.

Brian Steel Wills is the Director of the Center for the Study of the Civil War Era and Professor of History at Kennesaw State University in Kennesaw, Ga. In addition to leading tours, offering lectures, and conducting programs, Dr. Wills is the award-winning author of numerous works relating to the American Civil War, including biographies of Confederate generals Nathan Bedford Forrest and William Dorsey Pender and Union general George Henry Thomas. He has also written about the Civil War in Virginia and in the movies and has most recently published a volume that focuses on noncombat deaths in the Civil War. A graduate of the University of Richmond, Va., and the University of Georgia, he spends time on his farm in Virginia when not teaching and working in Kennesaw.
